tous celebs-of-the-moment Avril Lavigne, Jake Gyllenhaal and Kelly Osbourne. "There's always a place in fashion for looking like a dork," says People magazine style editor Steven Cojocaru. To find a cap, hit any vintage store, eBay or even your dad's closet—the more obscure the logo, the cooler. One warning: if you're not supermodel material, you'll just look like a real trucker.

TRENDS

CONDOM NATION

SOMETIMES OUR modesty (and the fact that our grandparents subscribe) precludes Tip Sheeters from testing out new products. So we'll just report on some big changes in the condom world. After an early boom in the safe-sex '90s, condom sales flattened out—so makers came up with pleasure-boosting innovations to improve sales. Some of the hottest new products at condomania.com:

Trojan's Extended Pleasure, the world's fastest-selling condom, has a desensitizing agent (on the inside only); Inspiral condoms balloon out at the top, so there's more feeling at the tip of the penis; Trojan's Her Pleasure puts those old ribs where they'll do more good—on the condom's base; the Kimono MicroThin uses ultra-sheer latex for more sensation, while Durex's heat-conducting polyurethane Avanti does away with latex altogether.

CALL IT PUPPY LOVE

EVER SINCE MICK, the cocky Kerry blue terrier, won at Westminster last week, folks have been buzzing about the obscure Irish breed. Kerries do make good pets, but some warnings: they get aggressive with other dogs and require lots of grooming—weekly brushings and monthly trims. These dogs also make lots of mischief. "They're leprechauns in fur coats," says John Van den Bergh of the KBT Foundation. Still interested? Expect to pay $1,000, and never go through a pet store. See kerryblues.org or ukbtc.com for reputable breeders. But with current demand, you'll need the luck o' the Irish to find a puppy.
